

Cuts to hungry, poor test our budget morality

I agree that our government needs to balance the federal budget. However, I am troubled that current budget proposals in Washington focus on cutting vital programs for hungry and poor people.

Our budget is a moral document that tells the world what our priorities are as a nation. Hunger and poverty are not partisan issues.

As Congress discusses how to balance our federal budget, I hope and pray they will remember the needs of people who are suffering the most.

Ed Isakson
Indianapolis